

KNOWLEDGE OF MUSIC COMPLETES EDUCATION OF MODERN CHILD

The following is a paper given at a recent meeting of the local W. I. by Mrs. J. Welch.

It is a recognized fact that education is not complete without a practical knowledge of music.

This is usually taught by private tutors in the homes, as there is such a variety of instruments that only the elements of music can be studied in the schools. For the reason that music must be practiced as well as taught at home, and because it is apart from school work, children often feel that practice of music is taking up the time which they would otherwise have for play.

A normal healthy child needs a great amount of play and exercise in the open air, and as a result of this it is difficult to interest a child in musical studies.

As a rule, however, if mothers can keep their children while they are young, as the child grows older it will enjoy the study for its own sake and the practice of it will become a pleasure.

If a child has a natural gift for music should be encouraged in every way, for the positions at high salaries for accomplished musicians are becoming more plentiful every year, as are also the opportunities for gaining a musical education.

From a social standpoint a musical education brings a person into contact with the best musicians and gives one an entrance into the best homes, as well as the friendship of cultured people. It provides entertainment in the home, and by means of it, many a dull evening has been made pleasant and is something which should be furthered at every opportunity, both for the sake of the child of today and for future generations.

TOM MIX RETURNS IN BIGGEST FILM AND BIGGEST TRIUMPH

There has been some attempt of late to make a kid-glove hero of the virile Mr. Mix. Somebody discovered that he could wear a tuxedo and spats with quilts as much ease as he could wear chaps and sombrero, and sought to cash in on the phenomenon. It didn't work. Or, at least it didn't work with the real Mix fans. From an impersonal point of view, it may be interesting to note the versatility of one's favorite hero. But Tom Mix long ago enthroned himself in the hearts of his audience knows that a real cowboy doesn't take kindly to a "boiled" collar.

So Mix is back again on "Tory," riding hard, shooting again and leaping from crag to crag to make rescues which make the heart beat fast and the heart beat fast and the pulses throb. Mix is back again in the old role, and around him is woven a fine story of love, adventure and romance. Yet, even while people feared him they respected his bravery and loved him for his fairness, and sudden, quixotic kindness to those in distress or need.

BILL PASSES THROUGH COMMITTEE ON FEEBLE MINDED

EDMONTON.—A census of feeble minded children in the province is provided for in a bill which passed through committee of the whole in the legislature sponsored by the minister of agriculture.

The bill also provides for half year reports to the medical superintendent of the provincial training school with regard to the mental condition etc., of any person removed from an institution. It also provides for parole of any mentally defective person conditional on sending quarterly reports to the superintendent.

Inspectors of schools are required by the bill to report in all cases where they believe a child to be mentally defective. Forms fixed in the measure for the use of a justice, when he is notifying the minister of health, that he has assigned a mentally defective person to the care of some responsible person, and for admission to the provincial training school for mental defectives at that time.

ELECTRIC UTILITY COMMITTEE REDUCES RATES FOR LIGHTS

The following are the official minutes of the meeting of the Town Council which was held on Friday last in the Council chamber.

All members were in attendance. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

A communication was read from the Mayor, bringing to the notice of the Council that he had been requested by the inspector from the Department of Neglected Children to give an order for the committal of four children, now in the care of Mr. L. H. Howes to that department, and asking that the matter receive their consideration.

Forster-Welch.—That the communication re neglected children be laid on the table for discussion.—Carried.

The matter was thoroughly discussed by the Council and the Town Solicitor who was in attendance, and finally Huntingford-Fraser.—That the communication re the matter of proper disposal of the Byron children, as presented to this Council by Mr. Howes, be returned through the Mayor with the information that the solicitor advises that the Town carries no responsibility in the matter and advise her to report the full facts of the case to the Attorney General's Department.—Carried.

A communication was read from Mr. H. Renville, making an application for the carrying out of the scavenging and maintenance of the streets and sidewalks, and asking if such an arrangement could be arrived at.

Knowles-Forster.—That the communication from H. Renville be held over for consideration in connection with the pending scavenging programme.—Carried.

A petition presented by several rate payers who are using cesspools asking that the rate for emptying the same be reduced to fifty cents per tank commencing the first day of April, was presented to Council.

Knowles-Lisimore.—That the petition re decrease in cesspool rate be laid over for discussion.—Carried.

A copy of the resolution passed by the citizen's meeting held on March 12 was laid before Council, as follows:—

(Copy) "Be it resolved that this meeting of citizens of the Town of Wainwright recommends to the Town Council the necessity of improving the fire apparatus in the way of purchasing a chemical motor outfit, and that the secretary write other towns of a similar size with a view of comparing the outfits used by them with the Town of Wainwright."

The committee on Fire, Water and Light reported on the above, recommending that this Council accept the resolution passed at the citizen's meeting.

PROV. GOVERNMENT ARRANGING TO IMPORT HOGS FROM DENMARK

The Alberta Government is arranging to import Landrace hogs from Denmark, so farmers of the province may have an opportunity of studying the type of hog that supplies the bacon for which British markets so gladly pay a premium. Difficulties have cropped up in the shape of Dominion Government regulations against the importation of live hogs from Europe, on account of the fear of introducing disease into Canada. Hon. Mr. Motherwell has declared that the protection of Canada against the slightest possibility of outbreaks of the foot-and-mouth diseases is of greater importance than the importation of any animals from that if the most stringent health and quarantine regulations are observed it should be possible to import these hogs without danger, and the matter is still under discussion between the two governments.

PIONEER DEFINED

Motion picture fans who plan to see "Pioneer Trails," a Vitaphone super-production coming to the Theatre on April 1st and 2nd, will be highly interested in knowing just what a pioneer really is. The word is derived from the Latin and was used in Caesar's time to designate a foot-soldier who with spear, axe and other implements preceded an army or military detachment to clear or make a road to expedite the troops' advance. From this the word has come to apply actually and figuratively to those who are first in exploring or working in an undeveloped country.

TO DISCUSS AFFAIRS OF WHEAT POOL

A meeting is being held on Saturday next in the theatre commencing at 10 a.m. for the discussion of affairs of the wheat pool and other important business.

Mr. H. W. Wood and Mr. Jackson have both been invited to attend and address the meeting. The sub-section of the Edmonton district which will be effected by this meeting extends from the provincial boundary on the east to west of Iron, and about 25 miles north and south throughout that territory. A big attendance is hoped for.

We understand that Mr. Bert Travis has now resigned his position with British Petroleum company and expects to leave for his home in the States very shortly.

DAWSON CUP GAME GIVE GOOD BRAND OF HOCKEY

The first game, on Wednesday, of last week furnished one of the most strenuous battles seen on local ice this season.

The visitors were out to win at any cost and the home crew were equally anxious to retain their strangle hold on the coveted mug.

This incentive coupled with the fact that Referee Cheetham allowed the players to mix things to their own pleasure had the effect of making the game very rough.

Hard body-checking, trips and deliberate slashing were freely indulged in. As one spectator was heard to remark "It was an open house."

At an opening, the Chauvinists stepped out as though their next move depended on the number of goals they could annex, and the first period ended 2-1 for Chauvin. At one time in the second the score stood 5-1 in their favor. However the Mormons had evidently shot their bolt and the locals to recover their second wind with the result that the game was tied up at the end of the third.

Three ten-minute periods were necessary to break the tie and in the last of these the Lubricators had it over their opponents like a half-headed eagle on a nest of robin eggs.

During the second period Jimmy Habkirk rushed through with what looked like a sure goal but was chopped down by the Chauvin defence and emerged with a bad cut over his eye and another beautiful decoration on his cheek bone.

Parmette also got a check one, but is still alive to tell the tale, while Billy Rodden of the visitors received a nasty smash in the eye by being hit with the puck.

In the last few minutes of play the locals were raining in shots on Chauvin goal with such regularity that it was only the sterling goal keeping of Burton that kept the score from being much higher. There is a rumor about town that Tommy Madkins the local team, was laid up for two days with a stiff arm the result of keeping it held aloft so much.

Goal summary—Chauvin: R. Stewart 3; J. Stewart 1; Weldon 1; Wainwright: Habkirk 3; York 2; Parmetter 2; Laying 1; Cunningham 1.

Final score—Wainwright, 9; Chauvin 5.

THE SECOND ATTEMPT!

On Monday evening a good sized crowd was out to see the second game as it was anticipated a battle royal was to be staged and had the ice been as hard as it was in the previous game there is no doubt the hopes of the fans would have been realized.

The game resulted in rather one-sided contest the final score reading 8-1 in favor of Wainwright. This, however, was not a true indication of the play as the visitors were through on several occasions but the breaks went against them, while the winners were lucky enough, to pick off a few soft ones.

Chauvin opened with a flip shot by Weldon on a pass out from the corner and a few minutes later, Torgy evened the score by going from end to end and scoring unassisted. This was all in the first period and it looked like an other close game but in the second the Lubricators ran wild and nipped up five counters while the challengers never once found the net, and in the third frame, the home team touched the hemp for two more and the visitors drew a blank.

The game was clean and kept well under control by referee Davidson. On the nights play, the locals were entitled to win but the score should have been closer.

Goal summary—For Chauvin: Weldon 1; For Wainwright: York 5; Habkirk 2; Torgy 1.

LONG TERM CONTRACT LET BY COUNCIL FOR SCAVENGING WORK

This is without doubt, the right time of the year, for the matter of the cleaning up of the town along the lines of scavenging, back lanes, streets, and so forth and accordingly, the Public Works and Scavenging Committee have been busy in the matter, to the end that they have now drawn up a hard and fast agreement for the proper carrying out of the duties pertaining to this work.

The report of that committee of the Town Council, which was presented at the last meeting reads as follows:—

"That, as authorized at the last meeting of the Council, we have interviewed Mr. R. Bailey concerning a proposition to take over the scavenging and utility work in town, and report that the proposition as outlined between that gentleman and your committee seems to be feasible, and merits consideration and early decision by this Council.

"In view of the fact that Mr. Bailey is especially equipped to handle a proposition of this kind, to both his own and the town's advantage, and that there does not seem to be a local contractor so equipped, we would consider it to be the advantage of the town that the appended proposed contract be entered into with this party."

The proposed contract as drawn up and attached to the report was as follows:—

Suggested life of contract—5 years.

Limit of population—5,000.

Arise—Present townsite limits as on file in secretary's office.

During the life of the contract, with a limit of population as stated above, and within the town limits before noted, the following work is to be carried on:—

(1)—All cesspools to be kept satisfactorily cleaned at all times, and to be entirely emptied once a week.

(2)—Household, hotel and restaurant garbage to be the sole property of the contractor and to be removed by him to a prescribed place and kept at a minimum of nuisance as required by municipal or provincial sanitary inspectors or health officers.

(3)—All privies to be maintained in a sanitary manner, the contents entirely eliminated weekly; lime at the discretion of the town to be used therein and a supply to be maintained in each building to be there placed by the contractor.

(4)—Cesspools and privies to be attended to solely between the hours of 10 p.m. and 6 a.m.

(5)—Ashes, tin cans and other useable refuse not maintaining a nuisance to be hauled and placed in road fills or other prescribed places within town limits, or other dumping ground within one mile of town limits.

(6)—Contractor to have exclusive right to all manure from any stables within town limits. If hauled by him self to be at a charge of One Dollar ($1.00) per average load; if hauled by owner it must be placed where contractor disposes within one mile of town limits.

(7)—All present roads, or roads that may be made, within the present town limits, within the life of this contract to be properly graded and drained whenever deemed necessary by Public Works department.

(8)—All present sidewalks or side walks that may be installed within the life of this contract to be kept in a satisfactory state of repair. Parts of present sidewalks that might be deemed necessary to be torn up in places to be repaired with cement or cinders as at the discretion of the Public Works department, by the contractor.

All material for repair work to be supplied by the town but all hauling and labor to be done by the contractor within town limits.

(9)—Cinders from railway or any town property to be hauled, when requested, to any desired location within town limits and placed for road and other fills.

(10)—The contractor to be given the power of Sanitary Inspector, with the minimum annual salary of $1,000.

(11)—The contractor to take over the present town team, two wagons, harness, two sets of sleighs, with all appurtenances to these implements, also scavenging tank, at a figure to be decided upon, and given six months to pay for same.

(12)—Contractor to have free use of present town or other grader, also rotary pump, for use within carrying out of this contract, same to be kept in repair by the town, under ordinary wear and tear.

(13)—Snow to be ploughed off where it becomes a nuisance on the streets, and sidewalks to be ploughed off where same can be done with a horse without damage to sidewalks.

(14)—Present scavenger to be given one month's notice on the signing of this contract, but this employee to be placed under the supervision of the contractor with a view to cleaning up the present situation as regards cesspools, privies and other nuisances. The town to pay for this month's services at the usual salary to the present employee in that work.

(15)—A bond in the sum of Two Thousand Dollars ($2,000.00) to be furnished through a reputable bonding firm, guaranteeing the suitable carrying out of this contract. Charges on above bond to be paid by contractor.

(16)—Payment to be made to contractor on the first of each month for the previous month's services.

(17)—That all remuneration in connection with collection of rates on cesspools, etc., to be the sole property of the Town of Wainwright.

(We understand that since the above tentative agreement was before the Council, the committee have interviewed all those who were interested in the matter, and that on Saturday last, the above agreement was entered into with Mr. Bailey, who will enter into his duties next week, at a remuneration of $175.00 per month.—Ed.)

Mr. H. Brunker was a visitor to the city on business last week end.

OLD INDIAN SCOUT HELPS TO FILM PRAIRIE MASSACRE

An Indian attack on a prairie caravan is one of the big scenes in "Pioneer Trails," a Vitaphone special production which will be shown at the Elite Theatre on April 1 and 2. David Smith, director of the picture has re-produced this sequence one of the more famous Indian massacres preserved carefully every historical detail.

To insure that the attack be historically correct, Mr. Smith availed himself of the services of an old Indian scout, "Pop" King, who is ninety years old, is the sole survivor of a group that started to California in the gold rush of 1849. All the others were killed during an Indian attack, in which King though dead was scalped and was rescued later and brought back to health.

King made the trip when he was seventeen years old. According to his story, the vanguard of the train hurried back to the main body when the Indians were discovered, evidently on the war path. The defense was speedily formed by drawing up the carts into a circle. Boxes, trunks bedding and other baggage were packed into the openings between wagons.

Hardly had the barricade been completed when they were surrounded by the fast riding, yelling Indians. After several hours battle practically every member of the party was killed or wounded.

The next thing he knew he was lying in a military barracks, his head in bandage. He had been picked up by a troop of cavalry sent in pursuit of the marauding Indians, King had been scalped. He was one of the few men that survived such an experience.

King proved quite helpful in the making of the cakaw scenes in "Pioneer Trails." His knowledge and experience helped Mr. Smith in correctly portraying an Indian attack, which forms one of the most thrilling sequences ever made.

PLEASEING ST PATRICK DANCE GIVEN BY WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

A theatre ablaze with color and decorations, and a bevy of fair ladies, with good music from the Brunker orchestra and a floor almost perfection made the St. Patrick's day dance given by the Women's Institute last week one well to be remembered. Mr. W. Goulet acted as M.C., and saw to it that as many as possible were partner off for the long list of dances, and that so far as possible every body present had a real good time before the break-up in the early hours of the next morning.

At midnight, a truly sumptuous luncheon was served up by the ladies and such a spread was truly done real justice too by the large crowd in attendance and complimentary remarks were in order for the ladies who had worked so hard to make the affair the big success is proved just another affair would have the support of practically all present for more than one future occasion.

WOULD NOT STAY ON FARMS AND ARE RETURNING TO HOMES

EDMONTON, Four families of Hebridean settlers who were brought to Central Alberta last spring have been sent back to Scotland and another family will be sent in the course of the next few days. This is the statement of D. E. Conroy, representative in Edmonton on the Scottish Immigrant Aid Society, under whose auspices the Hebrideans have been brought to Alberta who are paying their way back to their old homes.

Conroy makes it clear that the return of these families to the old country is being financed entirely at the expense of the society and is not costing the Dominion or provincial governments a cent.

"When Father MacDonnell arranged for their immigration to Alberta, it was stipulated that they should go to work on farms in this province and remain on the farms rather than come to the cities," said Mr. Conroy.

"These people have not stayed on the farms, but instead have come to Edmonton and other cities, where they were likely to become a charge on the municipality. Under these circumstances we decided that the best thing to do was to send them back home."

One family was sent on March 7, three more went last Saturday, and another will go in the course of a few days."

ALTA. OPPOSITION MEMBERS DIG UP BILLS OF $20,000

EDMONTON.—Opposition members are preparing to attack the government for alleged excessive employment of legal help outside the regular staff of the attorney-general's office and so far have dug up items totalling approximately $20,000 paid to various lawyers and legal firms in Alberta during 1924.

Included in these items, copied out of the public accounts are the following payments:—

Grain inquiry on the Van Allen charges: Paid to J.D.O. Mothersill $2,415.90; to G. H. Van Allen & Co. $6,465.26 Total $8,881.16

Joint appeal with British Columbia on freight rates case: Paid to Emery, Newell, Ford & Co. $2,041.30; to Bernard Mullin $557.04; other items bring the total to a little over $2,600.

Investigation of grain handling facilities, special report in connection with Edmonton Board of Trade inquiry: Paid to J. D. O. Mothersill, $379.25

Incidental justice: Paid to H. H. Parlee, $1,000; to McGillivray and Helman, $2,436.84; to G. T. Howell, $1,000; to F. Ford, $2,500; to Emery, Newell, Ford & Co., $1,050; to N. D. Dinagle $273; to Blake and Rodden, $38. Total, $8,441.

CURLING CLUB IN GOOD SHAPE SHOWN AT ANNUAL MEETING

At the annual meeting of the Wainwright Curling club which was held in the clubhouse at the rink on Thursday evening last there was a real good turnout of members, and the business of the meeting was conducted with despatch.

The annual report of the financials read by the outgoing secretary, Mr. M. Forster showed that after all accounts have been met there will be a small balance on the credit side of the club's ledger, which report was received with acclamation.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was then proceeded with the following results:—

Hon. Pres.—Mr. H. Pawling
Pres.—Mr. W. Brown
Vice-pres.—Mr. W. Tansley
Capt.—Rev. G. Praby
Sec.—Mr. M. Fyfe

Executive Com.—Messrs. H. Mills, G. Murray, J. Sutherland, D. Davidson and W. Bibby.

BARRE, SON OF KAZAN

James Oliver Curwood

A LOVE EPIC OF THE FAR NORTH

"BARRE, SON OF KAZAN," a Vitaphone Picture, With Wolf, the Wan Dog.
An Adaptation of This Story
Copyright, by Douglas Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Barre, son of Kazan and Gray Wolf, reached the climax in the first chapter of his education when he saw an owl swoop down and kill a snowball rabbit. Then the gray owl attacked Barre. The dog buried his teeth in the bird's breast but the owl fastened its beak on Barre's ear. Barre's fangs closed on one of the owl's tender feet and the dog's ear was freed. Together the antagonists fell into a creek and the owl flew away.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

When he went on, continuing in the direction he had been following yesterday, he slunk along in a disheartened sort of way. His head and ears were no longer alert, and his curiosity was gone. He was not only stomach-hungry; mother hunger rose above his physical yearning for something to eat. He wanted to snuggle, his shivering little body close up to her and feel the warm caressing of her tongue or her voice. And he wanted Kazan, and the old windfall, and that big blue spot that was in the sky right over it. While he followed again along the edge of the creek; he whimpered for them as a child might grieve.

The forest grew more open after a time, and this cheered him up a little. Also the warmth of the sun was taking the ache out of his body. He grew hungrier and hungrier. He had depended entirely on Kazan and Gray Wolf and Barre began to nose along the edge of these. For a long time he had no success. The few crayfish that he saw were exceedingly lively and elusive, and all the clamshells were shut so tight that even Kazan's powerful jaws would have had difficulty in smashing them. It was almost noon when he caught his first crayfish about as big as a man's forefinger. He devoured it ravenously. The taste of dog gave him fresh courage. He caught two more crayfish during the afternoon.

With the approach of night Barre's fears and great loneliness returned. Before the day had quite gone he found himself a shelter under a big rock, where there was a warm, soft bed of sand. Since his fight with Papayuchiew, he had travelled a long distance, and the rock under which he made his bed this night was at least eight or nine miles from the windfall. It was in the open of the creekbottom with the dark forest of spruce and cedars close on either side; and when the moon rose, and the stars filled the sky, Barre could look out and see the water of the stream shimmering in a glow almost as bright as day. Directly in front of him, rising to the water's edge, was a broad carpet of white sand. Across this sand, half an hour later, came a huge black bear.

Until Barre had seen the otters at play in the creek, his conceptions of the forests had not gone beyond his own kind, and such creatures as owls for food. His parents had, in some ways, made a great baby of him. Gray Wolf's blindness accounted for this, for since his birth he had not taken up her hunting with Kazan, and it was quite natural that Barre should stick close to her, though more than once he had been filled with a great yearning to follow his father. Nature was hard at work trying to overcome his handicap now. It was struggling to impress on Barre that the time had now come when he must seek his own food.

With the thinning out of the forest the creek grew more shallow. It ran again over bars of sand and stones and rabbits and small feathered things. The otters had not frightened him, because he still measured things by size and Nekki was not half as big as Kazan. But the bear was a monster beside which Kazan would have stood as a mere pigmy. He was big. If nature was taking this way of introducing Barre to the fact that there were more important creatures in the forests than dogs and wolves and owls and crayfish she was driving the point home with a little more than necessary emphasis. For Wakayoo, the bear, weighed six hundred pounds if he weighed an ounce. He was fat and sleek from a month's feasting on fish. His shiny coat was like black velvet in the moonlight, and he walked with a curious rolling motion with his head hung low. The horror grew when he stopped broadside in the carpet of sand not more than ten feet from the rock under which Barre was shivering as if he had theague.

It was quite evident that Wakayoo had caught scent on him in the air. Barre could hear him sniff—could hear his breathing—caught the starlight flashing in his reddish-brown eyes as they swung suspiciously toward the big boulder. If Barre could have known then that he—his insignificant little self—was making that monster actually nervous and uneasy, he would have given a yelp of joy. For Wakayoo, in spite of his size, was somewhat of a coward when it came to wolves. And Barre carried the wolf-scent. It grew stronger in Wakayoo's nose; and just then, as if to increase whatever nervousness was growing in him, there came from out of the forest behind him a long and wailing howl.

With an audible grunt, Wakayoo moved on. Wolves were pests, he argued. They wouldn't stand up and fight. They'd snap and yap at one's heels for hours at a time, and were always out of the way quicker than a wink when one turned on them. What was the use of hanging around where there were wolves, on a beautiful night like this? He lumbered on, decisively. Barre could hear him splashing heavily through the water of the creek. Not until then did the wolf-dog draw a full breath. It was almost a gasp.

CHAPTER IV

When Barre ventured forth from under his rock at the beginning of the next day, he was a much older puppy than when he met Papayuchiew, the young owl, in his path near the old windfall. If experience can be made, it takes the place of age, he had aged a great deal in the last forty-eight hours. In fact, he had passed almost out of puppyhood. He awoke with a new and much broader conception of the world. It was a big place. It was filled with many things, of which Kazan and Gray Wolf were not the most important. The monsters he had seen on the moonlit plot of sand had roused in him a new kind of caution, and the one greatest instinct of beasts—the primal understanding that it is the strong that prey upon the weak—was awakening swiftly in him.

If he could only find something to eat! That was the master thought that possessed Barre. Instinct had not yet impressed upon him that this which he saw all about him was starvation. He went on, seeking hopefully for food. But at last, as the hours passed, hope began to die out of him. The sun sank westward. The sky grew less blue; a low wind began to ride over the tops of the stubs, and now and then one of them fell with a startling crash.

Barre could go no farther. An hour before dusk he lay down in the open weak and starved. The sun disappeared behind the forest. The moon rolled up from the east. The sky glittered with stars—and all through the night Barre lay as if dead. When morning came he dragged himself to the stream for a drink. With his last strength he went on. It was the wolf urging him—compelling him to struggle to the last for his life. The dog in him wanted to lie down and die. But the wolf-spark in him insisted stronger. In the end it won. Half a mile farther on he came again to the green timber.

In the forests as well as in the great cities fate plays in changing and whimsical hand. If Barre had dragged himself in the timber half an hour later he would have died. He was too far gone now to hunt crayfish or kill the weakest bird. But he came just as Sekoosew the ermine—the most bloodthirsty little pirate of all the wild—was making a kill.

As Barre lay under his tree, Sekoosew was creeping on his prey. His game was a big fat spruce-hen standing under a thicket of black currant bushes. The ear of no living thing could have heard Sekoosew's movement. He was like a shadow—a gray dot here, a flash there, now hidden behind a stick no larger than a man's wrist, appearing or disappearing, the next instant gone as completely as if he had not existed. Thus he approached from fifty feet to within three feet of the spruce-hen. That was his favorite striking distance. Unerringly the launch himself at the drowsy partridge throat, and his needle-like teeth sank through feathers into flesh.

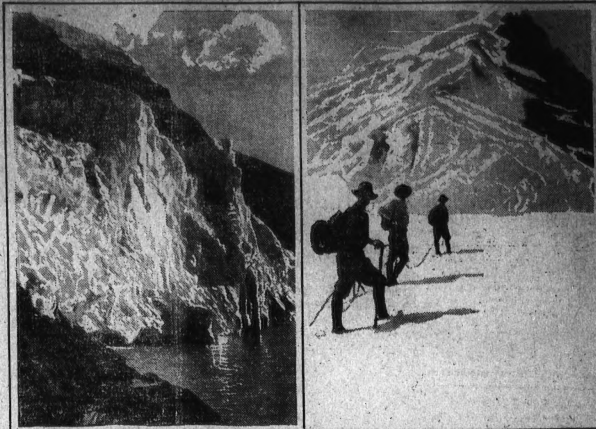

Sekoosew was prepared for what happened then. It always happened when he attacked Napanao, the wood-partridge. Her wings were powerful and her first instinct when he struck was always that of flight. She rose straight up now with a great thunder of wings. Sekoosew hung tight, his teeth buried deep in her throat, and his tiny, sharp claws clinging to her like hands. Through the air he whizzed with her, biting deeper and deeper until a hundred yards from where that terrible death thing had fastened to her throat, Napanao crashed again to earth.

Where she fell was not ten feet from Barre. For a few moments he looked at the struggling mass of feathers in a daze, not quite comprehending that at last food was almost within his reach. Napanao was dying, but she still struggled convulsively with her wings. Barre rose stealthily, and after a moment in which he gathered all his remaining strength he made a rush for her. His teeth sank into her breast—and not until then did he see Sekoosew. The ermine had raised his head from the death grip at the partridge's throat, and his savage little red eyes glared at a single instant into Barre's. Here was something too big to kill, and with an angry squeak the ermine was gone. Napanao's wings relaxed, and the throbbing went out of her body. She was dead. Barre hung on until he was sure. Then he began his feast.

Barre ate a third of the partridge and the remaining two-thirds he cached very carefully at the foot of the big spruce. Then he hurried down to the creek for a drink. The world looked very different to him now. After all one's capacity for happiness depends largely on how deeply one has suffered. One's hard luck and misfortune form the measuring stick for future good luck and fortune. So it was with Barre. Forty-eight hours ago a full stomach would not have made him a tenth part as happy as he was now. Then his greatest longing was for his mother. Since then a still greater yearning had come into his life—for food. In a way it was fortunate for him that he had almost died of caution and starvation, for his experience had helped to make a man of him—or a wolf-dog just as you are of a mpid to put it. He would miss his mother for a long time. But he would never miss her again as he had missed her yesterday, and the day before.

For another day and night Barre remained in the vicinity of this cache. (Continued on page 5)

CLIMBING THE MONARCH OF THE ROCKIES

MOUNT ROBSON, 13,088 feet high and the queen of the Canadian Rockies, was scaled several times during the annual camp of the Alpine Club at Berg Lake. The Tumbling Glacier (left) on the north side of Mt. Robson, is the only true tumbling glacier known to exist in the Canadian C.N.R. Photos.

PRIZE FOR SOMEONE

TO NAME THE PLAY

In connection with the play to be produced by the Wainwright Dramatic club at the theatre on March 25th, Mr.
R. Dunsmore, the author of the work is offering a new ten dollar bill for a suitable name for his new play. The rules of the contest are as follows:—
1. Only holders of adult tickets can compete. 2. These tickets have a detachable coupon on each end carrying corresponding numbers, and the purchaser retains both these coupons when handing in his ticket at the door. 3.
After you have witnessed the performance you decide upon a suitable name for the play, writing this upon the proper coupon. Then mail it to Mr. Dunsmore, Wainwright P.O. so as to reach him before March 31st, and hold the other coupon for verification.
Do NOT write your name or anything else on the coupon you send in; the number will identify you. The winner will be announced through The Star later.

WHY ARE TEACHERS

CLASSED AS "FLAPPERS?"

If the "farmer" member for the provincial constituency of Lac St.
Anne, Mr. Milton McKen, has been quoted correctly, a lot of the teaching staff of the province, who are at present
engaged in rural school districts,
have a full and abject apology coming
to them from that gentleman.

In an issue of The Edmonton Bulletin under date of last Wednesday
this member is quoted as saying:—
"The rural schools were dependent entirely upon inexperienced
teachers who migrated to the cities
as soon as they had shown sufficient ability. But the rural districts were being penalized."

"The rural districts for the most part were not in a position to pay high salaries. The seventeen-year flapper went out to such districts merely to gain experience, and there was no means of keeping them
for over one or two years."

Surely, upon a little mature reflection,
Mr. McKen can see that such statements as the above are in the main without foundation of any sort.
In the first place, the Normal school
at Camrose, is run upon such a curriculum that it is hard to conceive it to be a place for the up-bringing of young ladies for the "flapper" type,
in addition to which, the standards set for the necessary examinations taken there must conform with all the requirements of the Education Act.

If, therefore, the speaker quoted above considers that the class of finished product of our Provincial Normal school is of a type which the dictionary designates as "of a broad and loose type," surely there must be other ways and means of correcting the evil
without placing such an appellation general upon all and sundry who happen in many instances from force of circumstances only—to be placed in charge of schoolhouses in rural districts.

Again, in regard to the epithet being applicable to any in the district adjacent to us or right here in Wainwright,
such a term as "flapper" certainly seems like arrogant effrontery, for it is a well-known and universally accepted fact that our teaching staff in Wainwright, and all others in the territory adjacent thereto are of such type and character as raises rather than lowers the social standing of those with whom they associate or become acquainted.

And to the end that, at least so far as we are able to maintain, our teachers and particularly those who are teaching in rural districts may be removed from the stigma of such terms as Mr. McKen is reported to have used we reiterate, THEY HAVE AN APOLOGY COMING!

WHERE WOULD SUCH
LEVERAGE LIKELY END?

In studying "Hansard" with regard to the "Bill No. 2" now before the Federal parliament (this being an Act to Amend the Copyright Act) it would seem that it is the purpose of some one or other interested parties
to see to it that even our radio parties and concertists shall be controlled from the States.

At least, that would be the eventuality did the amendment to the Act ever get onto the statute books of the Dominion. It is desired by the promoters of the bill that the Copyright Act
as at present constituted shall extend to public performances of all compositions (and at present, plays, songs,
poetry, writings, photographs and a hundred and one other productions are in this classification) whose such performance is by use of the radio.

The unfairness of such an amendment is apparent on the face of it,
for as is well known in the profession,
in many instances huge sums are paid
to singers of renown to "put over"
new songs for the purpose of ultimately benefiting the composer of the piece, and there can be no gainsaying
that "ultimate benefit" is no mean offering either in hundreds of instances Why, then should not the composer be just as willing that his new "brain child" be advertised by means of the radio as by other means for surely the percentage of listeners by the one means as against the other would be increased a thousand-fold.

Is it move to put Canadian broad-music or other compositions as has been recognised as theirs to use for such purpose by the payment of the fee (possibly exorbitant—for there is no standard of royalties) demanded interests of the public generally that they can and must only listen to such by some lucky publishing house who has outbid all others for the right to collect such royalty.

In common fairness it might be remarked that the majority of new compositions emanate from the States—
or of not then—that the majority of them are controlled by a States publishing house, and so far as the right for reproduction lies purely and solely for hire or gain, some small payment or fee, might be quite correct when the composition is reproduced for that purpose; but in the case of its being broadcast by radio, such contention can hardly stand. Granted that advertising value of the radio in some small degree it can hardly be classed as a "public performance" inasmuch as the reception is in most cases in the secret privacy of the home, among one's family or that of a friend.

Again, the fact that the radio has come to stay and is proving such an adjunct to the education of the nation
on all matters of civility, economics,
markets, and State, is surely a weighty reason that the "shut-ins," the distant pioneers, aye, and even those who have become possessors of small one- and two-tube sets but could never dream of attending concerts, where such high-class and instruction music
is given, should not stand the chance of being deprived of such education and amusement as is thus afforded, in order that the coffers of the publisher
should be enriched beyond the means he already has at his disposal for recompensing himself for any outlay he has made to procure the right to "gamble"
with the brain child of some (too often struggling) composer or author. Back-is here and here to stay; let all enjoy it without further taxation.

LINK UP LOCAL ADVERTISING
WITH NATIONAL PUBLICITY

Judging from the manner in which retail merchants advertise in their home town papers, it is quite evident that they have the opinion that advertising is an expensive proposition. One is forced to this conclusion by a number of things. First, the small amount of space used; second, the poor manner in which they specify the goods for sale, and thirdly, by too much generalizing. If they would only realize that it is not advertising that is expensive but the lack of advertising, they would without doubt, find a tremendous difference in their business. If a merchant made a careful study of this phase of the business, as carefully as he does his buying, he would realize that approximately 25 per cent. of unadvertised goods become read stock on his shelves, while only 5 per cent. of nationally advertised goods fail to move, but this 5 per cent. would also disappear
if local dealers would link local newspaper advertising with the broader national publicity. There is no doubt that this is fundamentally sound advice. Publicity and newspaper advertising helps quick turnover. Customers will welcome information regarding prices, quality of goods, special lines
etc. It is good business to tell the people what you have to sell, rather than to wait for them to come to enquire if you have anything to sell—

"My Greatest Thrill In Sport"

Being an Account of an Adventure Which Overtook Ozark Ripley
On the Nipigon.

For many years I have hunted and killed all kinds of big game on the American Continent except trout and bear, and I have taken most kinds of fresh and salt water game fish.
But the greatest thrill I ever experienced during my thirty years
devotion to outdoor sports came to me this summer in July on the Nipigon River in the rapids just below
the Canadian Pacific bridge at Nipigon, Ont.

It all happened late in the evening.
The trout at this point are the most famed and largest brook trout in the world. But just at that time they were not striking as usual on account of the exceedingly cold night. However, I decided to go to the river to try out a little split bamboo bait casting rod, 2 1/2 ounces, that I had made for casting very light lures. It would be a revelation to myself and other anglers to take trout in this manner, when fly casting is the vogue.

The water under the Canadian Pacific bridge, and below for a quarter of a mile at least, flows like a millrace. I attached to my line a small weighted feather casting min-now, just to see if the little rod would shoot it. At the first try I shot the lure at least 125 feet across the water toward the west bank and in the opposite edge of fast water.

The very instant that the tiny lure struck the water the second of the only two large rainbow trout that up to then had ever been taken out of the Nipigon rose and seized my lure. He was a monster. It seemed impossible accomplishment ever to land that fish with the little rod and the fine nine-pound test casting line.
The thrill that came in that approaching darkness was incredible. The killing of moose and grizzly bear was in comparison.

I worked in a bad light nearly an hour, and in danger of falling into that deep, swift reach, trying hard to lead that fish out of the fast water
where the current would not aid it into the long upstream swirl on my side. The only thing that helped me in that fight was the generous supply of dried line I had in store on my reel
to help perfect thumbing of it.

I worked up and down those rapids in despair and hope, and as the value of the strong leaping fish

"It seemed an impossible accomplishment ever to land that fish."

directed. Yet the thrill of trying to land that whooping leaping rainbow with that tiny rod was something I had never conceived possible.
I began to grow darker. Suddenly on the left bank I saw a big black bear take to the water and swim deliberately toward my fish, despite that terrible current. Evidently he took it for a cripple. Right off, that rainbow sensed his presence and darted for the east bank as fast as it could reel in slack, and the bear kept his course direct for him.
The rainbow heading straight for the upstream water, with occasional glances from him. Finally galloping the stream of upstream current, with the bear only a few yards behind him.

That bear did not become apprised of my presence until he made a lunge
for the fish, missed it as it leaped out of the water, and then scrambled for the bank to get a better survey of his expected prey. That very moment he got a whiff of the man scent, wheeled and scrambled as fast as he could for the thicket of spruce along the shore
hillside.
And then the thrill of thrills occurred in the darkness as I rushed that spent rainbow, and brought him
along the coarse, narrow sand bank where, as he was far too large for my landing net, I fell on top of him and held him captive with my hands and knees until his strength was entirely exhausted.—New York World.

CHANGE ALBERTA DIVORCE LAWS; WIDER MEANING IN

A special definition of "cruelty" to include "intolerable" conduct" in an action for obtaining judicial separation of a married couple is contained in a bill relating to domestic relations which has been laid before the Alberta legislature. It considerably extends the older judicial meaning of the word and is contained in section 6 defining offenses on which judicial separation may be obtained.

6. (1)—A judgment of judicial separation may be obtained from the court either by a husband or by a wife if his wife or her husband as the case may be has since the celebration of marriage been guilty of (a) Adultery; or (b) cruelty; or (c) desertion without reasonable cause for two years or upwards; or desertion constituted by the fact of wife or husband as the case may be, having failed to comply with a judgment for restitution of conjugal rights; or

(2)—"Cruelty" in this act shall not be confined in its meaning to conduct which creates a danger to life, limb or health, but shall include any course of conduct which in the opinion of the court is grossly insulting and intolerable, or is of such a character that the person seeking the separation could not reasonably be expected to be willing to live with the other after he or she had been guilty of same.

The new bill is largely a codification of law which is in force in the province by virtue of having been English law upon July 15, 1870

ON PARLIAMENT HILL

OTTAWA.—From the character of the debate, already in the House of Commons, from the correspondence tabled in the House from day to day by different members of the Government and from the warm attacks made by different members of the Government, and from the warm attacks made by steamship companies, both on this side and on the other side of the Atlantic, against the Federal Government's plan for obtaining control of Atlantic freight rates, it has become evident that there has been uncovered one of the largest and most powerful combines now in existence. The control of freight rates now exercised by the North Atlantic Shipping Conference extends to a similar degree over almost every sea and is exacting a heavy toll upon all shippers and producers.

More serious in its effect upon Canadian goods and Canadian ports than the actual high rates maintained by the North Atlantic Conference is the gross discrimination against those ports those goods and in favour of the same goods shipped from United States. This discrimination, which was abundantly established in the evidence taken two sessions ago by the Special Committee on Agricultural Conditions and clearly demonstrated in the speech made by Hon. Thomas A. Cow Minister of Trade and Commerce on March 3rd, has been the subject of repeated protests to the Canadian Government for the past five years. It is noteworthy, though, that while the present Government has been quick to act up on such complaints by introducing a measure in Parliament the Meighen administration and the Borden Government only investigated and took no action whatever.

Another feature of this situation which has become the central subject of discussion this session both in and out of Parliament is that, following strong objections taken by British shipping interests to the subject matter of the Preston report, it has been arranged that concurrently with the investigation to be conducted by a special committee of the House of Commons there will be an enquiry by the Imperial Shipping Committee in Great Britain. Also, the evidence to be taken by the Canadian House committee will be transmitted from day to day to the Imperial Shipping Committee and, on the other hand, the latter body along with British shipping interests are arranging to have witnesses not only from Canada but also from Great Britain at the sittings of the Canadian committee and give evidence here. All this was disclosed in correspondence between the British and the Canadian Governments during the past three weeks and tabled in the House of Commons last Friday by the Prime Minister.

In one of the cables sent a few days ago by the Prime Minister to the Secretary of State for the Colonies in London it was made clear that the course of action now being pursued by the King Government was decided upon some time ago and was based upon the evidence and the recommendations of the special Committee on Agricultural Conditions two sessions ago. That cable said in part:—"That Special Committee found that a combine existed in North Atlantic traffic and it recommended that action be taken to control its operations. The Canadian Government will welcome before the Special Committee soon to be named representations from the Chamber of Commerce of the United Kingdom and throw their weight behind the Government. It is the Chamber can be met in getting it passed by Parliament. If for any reason the British Government should conclude that in addition to this enquiry it would be desirable to have an investigation by the Imperial Shipping Committee, the Canadian Government would not wish their course of action which was decided upon some time ago to deter in any way such further investigation."

Important contributions to the debate on this measure in the House of Commons during the week ended March 14th, were from Hon. W. R. Meighen, Minister of Agriculture; William Duff, Liberal member for Lunenburg; N. S. W. D. Euler, Liberal member for North Waterloo; Robert Forke, leader of the Progressive and Alfred Speakman, Progressive member for Red Deer. Alberta General Clark one of the Conservative members from British Columbia, had made a point of criticism that the ships which would be subsidized by the Canadian Government would be carrying out of the port of Montreal United States wheat as well as Canadian wheat and that another nation would reap some of the benefit which is intended for Canadian Shippers. To this Hon. Mr. Meighen replied in bond would be kept in separate bins and would not be mixed with Canadian wheat at any time. "The evidence given before the Royal Grain Commission," proceeded Mr. Meighen, "showed quite distinctly that we are on guard all the time to see that there is no mixture of wheat going by boat to Buffalo and New York. I can prove absolutely that there is no mixing of wheat by mistake. It is absolutely prohibited, and the whole staff of the United States customs officials are also on guard to prevent it." "I am prepared," said Mr. Euler in his speech last Thursday night, "to support any reasonable plan that may be suggested that will tend to destroy the power of an organization that is hampering the progress and prosperity of this country." Earlier in his speech he said, "What I like about the whole scheme is that it is at least a definite departure from the old condition of sitting still and bearing the imposition; it is now a case of definitely getting up and fighting the thing that has been strangling the business of Canada. The scheme is probably not perfect, but I have sufficient confidence in the breadth of view of the Prime Minister, the Minister of Trade and Commerce and the rest of the Government to feel assured that if, in this committee to which the whole matter is to be referred, suggestions are made that quite evidently it will be in the interest of parliament to accept, they will be accepted."

The attitude of the Progressive party, as expressed by its leader, Robert Forke, on Friday afternoon and by Alfred Speakman on Tuesday, is that they are not hostile to the plan, but simply critical. They readily recognize the existence of a great combine that is controlling ocean freight rates and exacting a heavy toll upon Canadian shippers and they are ready to aid any reasonable plan whereby that combine can be curbed in its operations and ocean rates reduced. They are not sure about the feasibility of the Government's scheme, and are anxious to have it completely investigated by the special committee. If and when that committee substantiates the charges contained in the Preston report and in the report of the special committee of two sessions ago and it finds that the Government's plan is the only plan

EDMONTON.—It cost the province of Alberta $1,921.30 to take members of the legislature on the sight-seeing trip last summer to Peace River, Grande Prairie, and other northern points, the public accounts tabled in the legislature reveal. Of this sum $1,355 was paid to the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway operated by the C.P.R. for fares and the balance was for expenses.

The public accounts are full of interesting items showing how the public funds are spent in various ways. For instance, in moving settlers from the dry areas to other points in the province, the public accounts reveal that $746.18 was spent for this purpose in the form of freight paid to railway companies.

Calgary officials will probably be jealous when they see an item of $563.39 in the provincial public accounts for helping entertain the Royal Naval Squadron last July in Edmonton the Calgaryans having footed the bill for the entertainment of the squadron there out of their own pockets. Also Edmonton was given $2,000 by government warrant for shipping the Edmonton Newsboys' Band to Wembley after the legislature had refused to vote the money last year. Other payments made by warrant included $400 to the Alberta Amateur Athletic Union and $300 to the Alberta Musical Festival.

SHOPPING AT HOME

The most clever and progressive women have learned the immense advantage of carefully reading the advertisements.

Those who are more dull of apprehension prefer to wander around in different stores hunting for the special bargains and unusually attractive articles.

The up-to-date woman of today sits down and takes her paper and reads the advertisements carefully before she goes "shopping."

She has learned by experience that the merchant's methods and has the most desirable feelings, is the one which makes his influence felt through his advertising.

The back number merchant does not an up-to-date merchant.

If he did not do this he would not be advertising.
Shopping at home, looking through the ads before you start out, saves time and annoyance and is sure to result in both economy and satisfaction.

It pays to read the advertisements

When the last bone was picked, he moved on. He now entered a country where subsistence was no longer a problem for him. It was a lynx country, and where there are lynx there are also a great many rabbits. When the rabbit, thin out, the lynx emigrate to better hunting grounds. As a snowshoe rabbit breeds all the summer through, Barre found himself in a land of plenty.

And this was straight into the trapping country of Pierrot, the halfbreed. Pierrot, until two years ago, had been pride of his reputation as a hunter. Until the Red Death came, life was quite complete for him. It was there, two years ago—that the smallpox killed his princess-wife. He still lived in the little cabin on the Gray Loon, but he was a different Pierrot. The heart was sick in him. "It would have died had it not been for Nepeese, his daughter. His wife had named her Nepeese which means the Willow. Nepeese had grown up like the willow, slender as a reed, with all her mother's wild beauty, and with a little of the French thrown in. She was sixteen, with great dark, wonderful eyes, and fair so beautiful that an agent from Montreal passing that way had once tried to buy it. It fell in two shining braids, each as big as a man's wrist, almost to her knees. "Non M'sieu," Pierrot had said a cold glitter in his eyes as he saw what was in the agent's face. "It is not for hanters."

Two days after Barre had entered his trapping ground, Pierrot came in from the forests with a troubled look in his face.

"Something is killing off the young beavers," he explained to Nepeese speaking to her in French. "It is a lynx or a wolf. Tomorrow—" He shrugged his thin shoulders, and smiled at her.

"We will go on the hunt," laughed Nepeese happily, in her soft Cree.

When Pierrot smiled at her like that and began with "Tomorrow," it always meant that she might go with him on the adventure he was content playing.

Still another day later, at the end of the afternoon, Barre crossed the Gray Loon on a bridge of driftwood that had wedged between two trees. This was to the north. Just beyond the driftwood bridge there was a small open and to the edge of this Barre paused to enjoy the last of the setting sun. As he stood motionless and listening, his tail drooping low, his ears alert, his sharp-pointed nose sniffing the new country to the north, there was not a pair of eyes in the forest that would have taken him for a young wolf.

"And Nepeese, aiming carefully at Barre, pressed steadily with her brown forefinger upon the trigger."

lived himself to be one of the most fortunate men in the big wilderness. That was before La Mort Rouge—the Red Death—came. He was half French and he had married a Cree chief's daughter, and in their log cabin on the Gray Loon, they had lived for many years in great prosperity and happiness. Pierrot was proud of three things in this wild world of his: he was proud of Wyola, his royal-blooded wife; he was proud of his daughter; and he was

From behind a clump of young balsams, a hundred yards away, Pierrot and Nepeese had watched him come over the driftwood bridge. Now was the time, and Pierrot levelled his rifle. It was not until then that Nepeese touched his arm softly. Her breath came a little excitedly as she whispered:

"Nootawe, let me shoot. I can hit him!"

With a low chuckle Pierrot gave the gun to her. He counted the whelp as already dead. For Nepeese, at that distant, could send a bullet into an inch square nine times out of ten. And Nepeese, aiming carefully at Barre pressed steadily with her brown forefinger upon the trigger.

CHAPTER V

As the Willow pulled the trigger of her rifle, Barre sprang into the air. He felt the force of the bullet before he heard the report of the gun. It lifted him off his feet, and then sent him rolling over and over as if he had been struck a hideous blow with a club. For a flash he did not feel pain. Then it ran through him like a knife of fire and with that pain the dog in him rose above the wolf, and he let out a wild outcry of puppyish yapping as he rolled and twisted on the ground.

Pierrot and Nepeese had stepped from behind the balsams the Willow's beautiful eyes shining with pride at the accuracy of her shot. Instantly she caught her breath. Her brown fingers clutched at the barrel of her rifle. The chuckle of satisfaction died on Pierrot's lips as Barre's cries of pain filled the forest.

As Seen by Popular Mechanics Magazine

Crutches on Caster Built for Dog to Help Cure Auto Injury

Partly lost the hind limbs as the result of being struck by an automobile, "Sport," a pet dog owned by a Wisconsin man, was pronounced incurable and preparations were made to chloroform him. But an inventive veterinarian heard of the case, designed a roller cage in which "Sport" could push himself about with his forelegs and now the dog is said to be well on the road to recovery. Strips of scrap iron were bent and bolted to form the support, which, when completed, resembled the frame for a small kennel. "Sport's" injured members were held from the floor by means of bandages passed under his body and over the top loops of the cage, where they were fast with strings. The dog was taught to use the contraption by placing him in it before he was given his food, and he would then push himself along to his dish. Now he has learned to bark until he is put into his wheel chair and manages to travel a considerable distance each day. The gradual exercise and protection the injured limbs are working what is expected to be a complete cure.

Connecting Phones to Amplifier

There is a right and a wrong way to connect phones to an amplifier. If they are incorrectly connected they become demagnetized and soon lose their sensitivity. The simplest way to find which is the best connection, is to plug the phones in at the last step of amplification and tune the receiver to the loudest possible signal; then remove the phone caps and lift one edge of the diaphragm with the finger until it clears the edge of the shell. When the phones are connected in one direction, you will observe a stronger pull than when the connections are reversed. When the connections are not placed as to obtain the greatest pull on the diaphragm, put a mark on the phone terminal that was connected to the plate of the tube. Thereafter always connect the marked terminal to the plate.

Manicure Set on Neck Ribbon Holds Tools in Handle

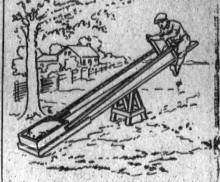

A manicure set so small it can be hung on a ribbon worn around the neck carries all the various instruments in a hollow tube which forms the handle for the articles when in use. Any of the tools may be adjusted in place in a few moments and are as easily manipulated as the ordinary kinds. Resembling a fountain pen, the compact set is small enough to be carried in a purse or pocket. The parts are protected against loss or rust and injury by a closely fitting cap.

Novel "One-Boy" Seesaw

Most playground seesaws require two persons to operate them. Finding this feature objectionable, a schoolboy with an inventive turn of mind devised a seesaw equipped with a movable counterweight, which enabled him to operate it alone. The counterweight consists of a wooden box placed near one end, and two lengths of 1 by 2-in. wood, attached to the box and to a pair of handles, which are pivoted on the seesaw within easy reach of the operator. The distance from the box to the center of the seesaw should be about the same as that from the center to the seat on the other end. A quantity of sand, approximately equal in weight to that of the one using the seesaw is put in the box, and then by moving the box back and forth the balance can be readily changed, causing the seesaw to work just as if two persons were operating it. The counterweight end of the seesaw is boarded in as shown to confine the movement of the sand box.

Coloring Brass Gray

To color brass gray, first clean the surface off with alcohol, polish it to a new finish, making sure that all grease and finger marks are removed, then immerse the work in a solution of arsenic chloride (poison), 1 oz., and water, 1 pt., until the desired shade is obtained. Wash in clean warm water, dry in boxwood sawdust, and warm and lacquer with a thin pale solution of bleached shellac in methyl alcohol, using a broad camel-hair brush.
